POWER YOUR CAREER THROUGH VOLUNTEERING

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT TEAM

Have you tried these smart tricks to gain PDUs by doing what you love?

Project managers are keen to deliver value, be it in their homes, communities, work environments, states, nations, continents, and global communities, which should add to their PDU count.

Some of these PDU-qualifying opportunities include:

1. Participating in a volunteer program with your local PMI Chapter or Community of Practice
2. Volunteering for a legally recognized non-profit project management organisation other than your employer.
3. Serving as an elected official or as a member of a committee on value-added projects.
4. Volunteering at PMI local, African, and global conferences as well as participating in research work.
5. Volunteering as a project manager or participant in community projects that promote long-term development and growth is one option.

So, get yourself involved in all or any of the above listed activities and claim your PDUs.

In the next newsletter edition, be expectant of how to report your PDUs earned through the above tricks on the PMI website

ABUJA OUTREACH BEGINS FACE TO FACE MEETINGS

ABUJA OUTREACH LEAD

It was an exciting time at the first Abuja outreach Face-to-Face meeting that took place on Friday 25th February 2022..

The event began with an icebreaker where participants had to find someone random, ask some questions and relay their findings to the entire group.

We were entertained by the guitar skills and soothing voice of Hephzebah, a singer and song writer.

Mr Imal Silva, the speaker for the day presented the topic, "The Business of Talent Management"

He suggested that business owners should not focus only on profit or your break-even strategy but develop sustainable organizational culture for employee turnover.

The event ended with "item 7" and networking.
